One other factor to consider when working with art is to use appropriate colors. It's good to be crazy and wild with the ideas you put in for your artwork, but also be aware that image is everything, and what you do will be judged by the eyes of anyone who views your photos. Look at the photo at the bottom right. Notice how the yellow background blends in with the SLR camera's lens, while the pastel stars stand out against the strips of film. Correspondence and matching will always matter in art, no matter what.

So consider these tips and facts for when you go out seeking for a job focusing on artistic fields. Know that you'll always have to always think outside the box, while keeping to certain rules for imagery. It's not easy to succeed in fine arts fields for a living, but it's a lot of fun to get creative and and make new things, so don't be afraid to pursue a job focusing on art if you have a strong passion for it. Who knows; maybe your work will turn out so nicely that it'll be recognized in famous galleries or be looked upon as a legacy decades from now. Just make sure to always persevere and think outside the box. When you make an art piece, keep those three words in mind.
